Course Outline	This is an introductory course in corporate finance, the goal of which is to develop analytical skills for making corporate investment and financial decisions. There are no prerequisites for the course. Throughout the course, we emphasize the real world applications with the practical perspective of financial manager. We enrich our discussion by examining behavioral/cultural aspects of the real world corporate finance.
Objectives	By the end of the semester, students will develop analytical skills for making corporate investment and financial decisions. They will be able to evaluate corporate investment projects, know how to finance them, understand how investment and financing decisions are related, and, based on such knowledge, analyze and discuss various topics of corporate finance we cover.
before/after course of study	After each class, review the class material carefully, and prepare for in-class quizzes, or do assigned problem sets.
